THE ANSWER IN ONE SENTENCE

The client is right that nothing is "wrong" with the account — and that's exactly the problem: Facebook's Content Monetization Program pays only on ORIGINAL content, and this page's model (ESPN/FOX segments, NCAA broadcast moments, press conferences, memes — "viral college sports news & clips 24/7/365" by its own description) is third-party footage that Meta classifies as unoriginal and Rights Manager matches as someone else's property, so every post can stay up, perform fine, and earn exactly $0.

THE DIAGNOSIS — TWO GATES, AND WHICH ONE IS FAILING

Gate 1 — Account eligibility (what the client thinks is broken): program access, Page status, country, policy strikes. Almost certainly fine — if it weren't, the Professional Dashboard would show a named violation and content wouldn't just earn nothing, monetization tools would be locked.

Gate 2 — Per-content eligibility (what is actually failing): since Aug 31, 2025 the unified Content Monetization Program replaced in-stream ads, Ads on Reels, and the Performance Bonus — and it pays only on content Meta classifies as original. Third-party broadcast footage fails twice:

- Originality: reposted clips are ineligible even with a caption, logo, or short intro; "transformation" requires creator commentary that dominates the piece.

— The brand's own positioning: "Viral college sports news & clips 24/7/365" — 909 videos. The recent set: ESPN's Ryan Clark vs. RGIII, Gus Johnson's best calls, College World Series broadcast moments, Saban/Leach pressers — all third-party footage. One original: their interview with FSU's viral punter.

- Rights: NCAA game footage belongs to leagues, conferences, and networks. Meta's Rights Manager fingerprints it — the match doesn't always remove the post; it silently blocks or reroutes the payout to the rights-holder.

FINDINGS

HIGH — THE CLIP MODEL IS NOW REACH-THREATENING, NOT JUST UNPAID

- Meta's March 2026 originality guidance escalated the stakes: accounts that repeatedly post mostly unoriginal material become non-recommendable and demonetized at the account level — and reshared content on Stories lost monetization eligibility in October 2026. The current model doesn't just earn $0; continued at volume, it will start costing distribution too.
- Severity note: this is a drift toward Gate-1 damage. The time to pivot is before Meta's classifiers reclassify the whole Page.

MEDIUM — FORMAT MIX COMPOUNDS IT

- Meme/screenshot posts (tweet screenshots, image memes) earn nothing in CMP regardless of originality — payouts concentrate in original video.
- Viral-bait caption patterns ("you won't believe," tag-a-fan framing) sit in the clickbait/engagement-bait bucket that is both ineligible and eligibility-threatening under the Partner Monetization Policies.

THE BRIGHT SPOT — THEY ALREADY MAKE THE THING THAT PAYS

- The one original piece in the recent set (the sit-down interview with the viral Florida State punter) is exactly the format CMP monetizes: creator-shot, creator-owned, sports-passionate. The pivot isn't a new brand; it's inverting the ratio.

THE PIVOT

MONETIZES — SCALE THIS

- Original interviews (the punter format) — athletes, coaches, NIL stories
- Face-and-voice commentary shows: rankings, debates, predictions, reactions where THEIR take dominates the screen time
- Original on-campus / gameday atmosphere footage they shoot
- Broadcast moments as brief, attributed references inside dominant original commentary — not as the content itself

NEVER PAYS — STOP EXPECTING IT TO

- ESPN/FOX segment reposts; broadcast game clips
- Press-conference footage uploaded as-is
- Tweet screenshots and meme images
- Caption-only "transformation" of someone else's video

The honest framing for the client: a clips page is an audience asset, not a revenue asset. The audience is real — the monetizable product has to be made, and they've already proven they can make it.

ACTION PLAN

Today:

1. Pull the Professional Dashboard screens in Section 6 — they will confirm this diagnosis in Meta's own words (per-post "not eligible" labels and reasons).
2. Stop expecting back-catalog clips to ever pay; no appeal changes third-party footage.

This week:

1. Greenlight 2 original formats: a weekly interview show (the punter template) and a 3–5x/week face-and-voice reaction/debate short where the host carries ≥80% of screen time.
2. Kill meme-image and tweet-screenshot posts on the Page (keep them on X where they're native).

Ongoing:

1. Target ratio: within 60 days, majority-original on the Page — both for CMP payouts and to stay ahead of the March 2026 unoriginality de-recommendation regime.
2. Rights hygiene: any broadcast moment appears only inside dominant commentary, short and attributed; expect Rights Manager matches regardless and treat those posts as unpaid promos.

WHAT WE NEED FROM THE CLIENT

1. Professional Dashboard → Monetization: the eligibility screen and any policy-issues panel (screenshot).
2. Meta Business Suite → per-post monetization labels on 5–10 recent videos ("not eligible for monetization" + stated reason).
3. Support Inbox: any Rights Manager / intellectual-property notices.
4. Confirmation that the Facebook page's content mix matches the YouTube/TikTok mirrors (we could not view the Page logged-out), and Page follower count.
5. Whether they were ever invited to CMP (invite-only) or applied and were rejected — if never invited, the unoriginal library is also why.

Re-audit at 30 days: original formats live, per-post labels turning eligible on new content, dashboard clean.

This audit assesses eligibility under Meta's Partner Monetization and Content Monetization Policies as understood at the audit date. Program access and payouts are at Meta's discretion; no content change guarantees invitation or earnings. All recommendations aim at genuine compliance — we do not advise tactics to disguise unoriginal content, which converts a payout problem into an account problem.
